‘Secure Communities’ to stay in Hub

While state officials yesterday decided not to continue with the controversial Secure Communities program, Boston’s leaders said the city’s practice of sharing fingerprints with immigration offices would continue.

“Yes it does,” said police Commissioner Ed Davis, when asked if the program has worked in Boston. “But we’re constantly re-examining it.”

Minority groups have opposed the federal program that refers many arrested illegal immigrants to federal departments for deportation.

Opponents have said the program deports people who have committed minor offenses and leads to racial profiling.

“We are obviously very pleased that Governor Patrick has decided to not enter Massachusetts into the Secure Communities program,” the Somerville-based advocacy group Centro Presente said in a statement. “We hope that Mayor Menino will reconsider Boston's participation in this program in light of its poor performance.”

Cops, Bruins urge safe fan behavior

● Strict enforcement of alcohol laws will be on menu ● Police warn that arrested students face sanctions ● No special protection for ‘Green Men’

Yesterday’s “pep conference” by city, police and Bruins leaders offered some encouraging words for Bruins fans and some warnings for those who plan to cause mayhem.

“For students who are arrested, there will be consequences from your college or university,” said police Commissioner Ed Davis. “If asked to leave an area, do so promptly.”

The warnings come as the Bruins try to win their first Stanley Cup in 39 years and the first Stanley Cup finals game to be played in Boston in two decades.

Past celebrations after other Boston sports team victories have turned violent, destructive and sometimes deadly.

Davis said there were “hundreds” of officers that would be ensuring the public’s safety during the games. Transit Police Chief Paul MacMillan said there would be additional transit officers on hand as well.

When asked by a reporter about the Vancouver Green Men’s concern about being beaten up while in Boston, Davis said there were no plans to follow them or provide any sort of special protection. The Green Men are known for harassing opposing players in the penalty box during Canucks games.

The conference, held just hours before the puck dropped to start Game 3, included words of encouragement that might have helped worried Bruins fans breathe a bit easier.

“It’s been a great ride for us, but it’s not over for us by any stretch,” said Bruins president Cam Neely.

Hate crime at station?

BOSTON. Police are investigating a possible hate crime inside one of their own buildings.

Investigators are looking into graffiti inside a bathroom at the Mattapan station on Blue Hill Avenue, police spokeswoman Elaine Driscoll said.

The writing “is potentially racially motivated,” she said, declining to further describe it. METRO

Two shot, one dead in Rozzie

BOSTON. Police yesterday were still searching for the gunman who shot two people, one fatally, late Sunday in Roslindale.

Police responded to Brookway Road about 10:15 p.m. and located the two 23-year-old men suffering from gunshot wounds.

One was pronounced dead on scene and the other was critical. METRO

DSK: Not guilty in sex case

NEW YORK. Former IMF chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn pleaded not guilty yesterday to charges he sexually assaulted a New York hotel maid in a case that cost him his job and a chance at the French presidency. Strauss-Kahn, 62, faces up to 25 years in prison if convicted on charges including attempted rape, sex abuse, a criminal sex act, unlawful imprisonment and forcible touching. REUTERS

Santorum puts hat in '12 ring

SOMERSET, PA. Former Sen. Rick Santorum launched a long-shot Republican bid for president yesterday, pledging an unflinching commitment to conservative policies, including a Medicare reform plan that has proved unpopular with voters.

"We're going to be in this race, and we're in it to win," Santorum told ABC's "Good Morning America" in an interview. REUTERS

Rep. Weiner admits Web sex affairs while married

Congressman from New York owns up to illicit pics sent to woman via Internet ◐ No plans to resign post

Rep. Anthony Weiner yesterday tearfully admitted having a number of online sex relationships with women over the Internet, saying he was deeply ashamed of his actions but would not resign.

Weiner, a New York Democrat and a leading liberal voice in the House of Representatives who is expected to run for mayor of New York City in 2013, also admitted to inappropriate Internet and telephone conversations with six women — but said none of them developed into a physical relationship.

Ethics probe

U.S. House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi has called for an ethics panel probe into Weiner's conduct after he admitted having Internet sexual relationships with a number of women.

"I'm deeply regretting what I have done and I'm not resigning," Weiner told a news conference while wiping away tears.

"The picture was of me and I sent it," he said of an image sent over Twitter of a man in his underpants, which sparked the scandal more than a week ago.

"This was a very dumb thing to do and it was a very destructive thing to do," he said, stressing that he has never had sex with a woman other than his wife since he was married. REUTERS

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Talking points

Sarandon a hands-on mom

When it comes to Eva Amurri's upcoming wedding to soccer player Kyle Martino, she's more than happy to hand off tasks her mother, Susan Sarandon, according to People magazine. "She's so organized. If she asks me, then I do it," Sarandon says. "She told me to find the cake topper, so I'm working on that. I trust her judgment. She's very smart and very organized."

Zuma breaks his arm

Hearts nearly stopped at the home of Gavin Rossdale and Gwen Stefani recently when their 2-year-old son Zuma took a tumble off of a countertop, requiring a trip to the hospital, according to People magazine. "It was one of the worst nights of our lives," Rossdale says. "He's fine now. It's almost worse for us." Zuma was treated for a broken arm.

Klum bares all

Now 38 years old and a mother of four, Heidi Klum still isn't afraid to let it all hang out. The supermodel reportedly went nude for an ad campaign for the new season of her series, "Project Runway," according to the Hollywood Reporter. Nancy Dubuc, the head of "Project Runway" network Lifetime Television, says a nude Klum will help the network convey a new message of "brazen, strong, confident and sexy" women.

Negotiations almost over

Well, here's one contract negotiation that's gone better than expected for Charlie Sheen: After months of bitter fights, he and ex-wife Brooke Mueller have reportedly reached an agreement for custody of their twin sons, Bob and Max, according to Us Weekly. They are said to be "satisfied" with the terms, which weren't disclosed. Hopefully there's money set aside for future shrink visits for those poor kids.

▶ Does Sheen look satisfied to you?

Attack of the minis at the MTV Movie Awards

Here are the highlights from Sunday's MTV Movie Awards: Host Jason Sudeikis pretty much bombed; presenter Justin Timblerlake cupped the breasts of Mila Kunis, who, in turn, grabbed his crotch, an inebriated-seeming Robert Pattinson dropped an F-bomb, "Twilight" pretty much won everything in sight, Justin Bieber didn't walk the red carpet but dropped by for a "surprise" appearence (gag), MTV Generation Award winner Reese Witherspoon told the audience that "it's totally possible to be a good girl – I'm going to try to make it cool" and Gary Busey rolled onstage in a giant hamster ball. All in all, just another award night for MTV.

Despite the scattershot night, one thing remained constant on the red carpet: All the starlets were showing off their gams. We round up the leggiest:

When mobile phones revolt

And you thought a dropped call was bad Try the robot uprising — and the death, destruction and near-annihilation of the human race that comes with it — in Daniel H. Wilson's new thriller 'Robopocalypse'

Although the robots in his new thriller "Robopocalypse" attempt to decimate the human race in the bloodiest ways possible, author Daniel H. Wilson still has a sweet spot for the heartless killing machines. "I love robots," he says (Wilson earned a Ph.D. in Robotics from Carnegie Mellon). "To me, I feel like they're really the good guys."

Good guys don't normally kill off and enslave the human race, though, right?

Wilson laughs, admitting that yes, robots — especially those who unite to fight us in the robot war as envisioned in "Robopocalypse" — can be a bit frightening. "We rely on technology more than ever; and the more we're dependent on it, the scarier it is," he says. "What if all of our technology stopped working and it turned against us? I'll admit — that's pretty scary."

▶ Daniel H. Wilson says the huge buzz around "Robopocalypse," out today, has been incredibly surprising. "I'm utterly floored by it," he says.

"We rely on technology more than ever; and the more we're dependent on it, the scarier it is."
DANIEL H. WILSON

Scary, but also a tempting scenario for a movie adaptation — which is currently in the works with Steven Spielberg set to direct.

"The book was optioned by DreamWorks, and he's publicly announced he's going to direct. It's news so good that I have to focus on just the book for now because if, for some reason, it doesn't go through, it would crush my soul," Wilson laughs. "But everything is going according to schedule. They're creating an amazing ecosystem of robots. It's amazing to see this thing you've come up with created by really talented artists."

Amazing — as long as those robots don't get any big ideas.

DOROTHY ROBINSON
dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Hardest goodbye

So, if one of Wilson's machines just stopped working forever (not to mention tried to kill and/or enslave him), which would he be most bummed about?

"I don't like driving, and I always feel like I'd be better off without a phone, but I'm really sentimental about this little scooter from the late '70s I have. And on the rare day we get some sun in Portland, there's nothing better than getting on it and feeling the wind in my face."

When is Obama responsible?

"DON'T FORGET – IT'S BUSH'S FAULT": I am the first one to jump on the "bash Bush" bandwagon, and believe me it is a perpetual ride; but to continually blame Bush for the constant economic flux is getting to be a bit redundant. If the Obama administration cannot come up with policies and economic agendas that will counter everything that the former president did, then I would say it then becomes the problem of the current administration. MICHAEL WIMMS, VIA E-MAIL

Obama did not "inherit" anything from Bush. He campaigned for the job of the presidency and all that comes with it (good and bad). No other president or supporters of past presidents have ever blamed their predecessor for their predicament as has this one. D. CANCELMO, VIA E-MAIL

Palin mistake: The mass media

RE: "PALIN REWRITING HISTORY – ONE TOUR GAFFE AT A TIME": Yes, many of us have heard of the ride of Paul Revere to warn the colonists that the British were coming; the question is why they were coming. For your information, they were coming to seize the colonial stores of gun powder. Funny how many in the media can overlook incontinent truths if it serves their purposes of mocking a politician they dislike. JACK ATKINS, VIA E-MAIL

With the media tripping all over themselves to cover Palin's look-at-me tour, I commend Metro for opting to capture her schtick with this fun headline. Palin reads like a cartoon character who will exploit whatever it takes, including facts, to get her mug in front of the camera. SOPHIA DEMAS, VIA E-MAIL

I would like to thank Metro for the well-written article that appeared in your paper today regarding the anniversary of D-day ... oh wait, there wasn't an article. But I did learn all about Prince Williams' hat selection, though. No wonder Sarah Palin keeps making historical errors: She's obviously reading the Metro! GORDON HALLETT, MALDEN

Don't ask me to support you

RE: "GATES: CAN'T OPT OUT DUE TO DADA REPEAL": Gay servicemen and women fight for this country and, supposedly, its many freedoms. If gay soldiers who risk their lives every day don't have the right to serve openly, what are we fighting for? AARON JASPER, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Don't try to detail something before you have the basics in place. The smaller pieces will slip in much easier if you establish the big picture first.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Certain confidential information will eventually benefit you, but not until it is time to reveal the game plan. Prematurely disclosing what you know could cause a collapse.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Rely on your own assessment of a situation instead of on the perceptions of others. When you decide to sift through relevant clues, you aren't likely to miss anything.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. One of your greatest talents is taking nominal information and being able to use the fine points to define what others are missing. You end up with truly worthwhile results.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. What was initially intended to be a moderate gesture of goodwill toward you by a loved one could suddenly turn into something much grander than anybody ever anticipated.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. If you are in need, know that you can turn to persons with whom you share strong emotional bonds for help or support. These wonderful friends will be there for you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Don't hesitate to paint your canvas with huge, bold strokes and bright colors. Your big ideas will be better than the smaller ones.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Although you might have to work hard for it, you could do better than ever, materially. Don't hesitate to put forth whatever effort is needed in order to score a big-time profit.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Without any hesitation, you'll take control of developments when you see those in charge faltering, but it will only be the right thing to do if you feel you can fare better than they.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. A project that appeals to a number of people should meet with success, mostly because everyone involved is looking out for the other guy.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. The best way to accomplish your purposes is to get in lockstep with a specific group that has the clout to make the changes you propose.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Figure out ways to constructively restart something you already have in the hopper that has been stalled for far too long. The answers are there, if you'll seek them out. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Awesome Austin

"Keep Austin Weird" is the motto in Austin, Texas — but this isn't the kind of weird that will make you crinkle your nose. Sure, the city is not unlike New York in that it's home to magnificent architecture, unique shops and world-class eats, but Austin has a certain "je ne sais quoi" that adds eccentricity to everything it touches. If you need a break from the East Coast, consider a jaunt to perhaps the most famous intersection between the south and southwest.

▶ W Austin
Open since December, the new W Austin brings the city's outdoor scene inside to a chic, sexy space. The W's global brand leader, Eva Ziegler, likens each room to a "personal playground" — and once you step inside, you'll see why: Each boasts a flat-screen TV, iPod deck and charging station, Bliss Spa products and that so-heavenly-they-decided-to-sell-it W signature bed. The fourth floor — home to the hotel's SWEAT gym, AWAY Spa and WET rooftop pool/cabana lounge — is pulsing during the day, and the downstairs bars and lounges, including the low-lit, red-enveloped Secret Bar — are the places to see and be seen at night. The W makes sure not to compromise Austin's uniqueness at the expense of the hotel, as reflected in the space's Moroccan rugs, patchwork art and metallic tints. 200 Lavaca St., 512-524-3600, www.whotels.com/austin

Bruins seize game, role of 'hero' after Rome's vicious blindside hit
B's star taken off ice on stretcher in first Boston has all the momentum

The Bruins won both a blowout and the moral high ground last night.

After the Canucks' latest cheap shot sent Nathan Horton off the ice on a stretcher in the first period, the B's turned Game 3 of the Stanley Cup finals into a shooting drill, winning 8-1.

Vancouver still leads the series 2-1, but Boston has all the momentum going into tomorrow night's Game 4 at the Garden (8 p.m., VS., 98.5 FM).

The blowout started with an illegal hit.

Five minutes into last night's game, Canucks defenseman Aaron Rome jumped and threw his elbow into the head of a defenseless Horton at the blue line. The B's star was left motionless on the ice, and Rome received a game misconduct.

"Our spirits are OK. I heard guys saying, 'Let's do it for Horty.'"

BRUINS COACH CLAUDE JULIEN, DURING THE GAME

A chippy first period ended with the game scoreless, but Boston took control in the second.

Andrew Ference gave the B's a 1-0 lead just 11 seconds into the frame, then assisted on a Mark Recchi power-play goal 4:22 in.

Brad Marchand potted a highlight-reel goal all by himself seven minutes later, and David Krejci's 11th goal of the postseason capped the frantic period late.

On the other end of the ice, Vancouver looked demoralized and out of sorts — different from the team they were at home. METRO

Gonzalez

Gonzalez key to the series

Adrian Gonzalez hasn't crushed the Yankees, but the Red Sox certainly have.

Going into tonight's game in the Bronx (7:05 p.m., NESN, WEEI), Boston has taken five of its first six against New York.

Any hope the Yanks have of reversing that trend starts with Gonzalez, who's just 5-for-23 against pinstripe pitching this year, but owns a .378 average with three home runs and 16 RBIs since their last meeting May 15.

LARRY FLEISHER/METRO

Gonzalez is hitting .423 (11-for-26) the past week.

3.41

The Yankees have lowered their staff ERA from 3.85 to 3.41 during the last three weeks.
